MEAL TIME

WEEK 1:

Ask a kid: Do you think it's okay to be friends with people who are different from you?

Ask a parent: When have you ever felt different or unimportant, but a friend reached out and accepted you anyway?

WEEK 2:

Ask a kid: What can be lost when friends don't forgive each other?

Ask a parent: Why is it better to forgive right away when a friend hurts you?

WEEK 3:

Ask a kid: What is one small way you can encourage a friend today?

Ask a parent: How do you feel when you take the time to encourage someone?

WEEK 4:

Ask a kid: Where are some places that kids that might need a new friend?

Ask a parent: What are some ways you can show friendship to others?

PARENT TIME

If your family's weeknights look like ours, they're crammed full of homework, volunteer meetings, sports practices, and the evening prep to get up and do it all over again tomorrow. Dinner—especially dinner together as a family—can take some serious planning. It's so much easier to just hand everyone a smoothie and a nutrition bar on the way out the door.

But dinner together as a family is worth the effort. Even if some days (most days?) you only have 10 minutes to sit down and eat together, you're establishing a routine that will provide stability and comfort for your kids. And on days when you have some time, use the MealTime Discussion questions on this page to engage with your kids.
