PARENT TIME

Would you describe your son or daughter as “creative?” Maybe they like to draw, dance, or write short stories, so you’d naturally say they’re creative. But if they were good at designing football plays or resolving conflicts with friends, would you still say they’re creative?

There’s something about creativity that we all need to remember: We’re not creative because of our talents. We’re creative because that’s how God made us. He designed each of us with a mind to think beyond ourselves and imagine the possibility for—well, anything.

Regardless of the talents we have that demonstrate our creativity, we all reflect the image of God with our imaginations. For more about unleashing the creativity in our kids, visit:
